
Spanish Studies Colloquium

Human Rights and US Policy in Post-Coup Honduras: a talk by Dana Frank

Dana Frank is professor of History at the University of California, Santa Cruz, and the author of Bananeras: Women Transforming the Banana Unions of Latin America, among other books. Since the 2009 coup her articles about human rights and US policy in Honduras have appeared in the New York Times, Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, World Policy Review, Politico Magazine, Los Angeles Times, Miami Herald, Houston Chronicle, The Nation, The Baffler, Jacobin, and elsewhere, and she has been interviewed by the New Yorker, Washington Post, New York Times, Associated Press, National Public Radio, BBC World News, ABC/Fusion, and regularly for Democracy Now!

Wednesday, February 8th @ 5pm
Humanities 1, Room 202

Sponsored by Spanish Studies